Clube de Golf do Santo da Serra

A Robert Trent Jones Sr. Course

Ranked as one of the top 100 courses in Europe, Clube de Golf do Santo da Serra is the oldest course in Madeira. The 9-hole Serras course was originally built in 1937, and re-designed in 1991 by Robert Trent Jones Sr. when he created the new 18-hole championship course, transforming Santo da Serra into a spectacular 27-hole course. Considered the leading golf architect of his time, Robert Trent Jones Sr. also created such masterpieces as Valderrama and Spyglass Hill of Pebble Beach.

The past years have seen consistent improvements to the course, which have been highly praised by Ryder Cup professionals and amateurs alike who play here every year.

The challenge of its mountainous terrain, ample fairways, beautiful lakes, strategic bunkers and four different tee positions on each hole provide a spectacular feast of golf. A serious challenge is provided for those seeking to play off the white tees, or a more casual round can also be enjoyed simply by choosing the yellow tee positions.

Clube de Golf do Santo da Serra has been the host of the islands' most prestigious tournaments, including the Madeira Island Open – part of the European Tour, for the past twelve years.

Open mountains act as the perfect backdrop for this course

The lakes and palm trees make the Serras course specially exciting

The island of Porto Santo can be seen at the clubhouse

Sublime views of the Atlantic Ocean and Ponta da Sila (mountain)

4th hole – Santo da Serra – Insulating signature hole

Stunning views of Desertas Islands can be seen from the 1st and 2nd hole
